Services will be conducted for the late Edward Link, a part-time American Sign Language teacher at BYU who died Friday. The service will be from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Utah Valley Deaf Ward, 200 South, Provo. The service starts at 10 a.m. Link died in the American Fork ward who was deaf, died at his home in American Fork following a long battle with cancer. He was born in Lancaster, Calif., and married Shaffrey Link. He was sealed in the Salt Lake Temple to Sandra Hoopes. They have three sons, Eric and Seth.

Link's graduation from Utah Valley College in 1990, Link graduated from BYU with a degree in linguistics. He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for many years and was a church member.

DALE EDWARD LINK

Link taught various classes at BYU, including American Sign Language 101 and 102 (Conversation), 201 (Grammar) and 301 (Deaf Culture). He was working on a Teaching English as a Second Language Certificate through the Linguistics Department.

Link was respected in the deaf community as a teacher and friend.

"Dale was a wonderful person," his wife, Sandra, said. "He had lots of time for his children. He was also very compassionate and a very good listener."

Mrs. Link said she would like people to remember him for his sense of humor and personality, his generosity and his service for people.

"Lessons Dale would want people to learn from his life are to never judge another person, to always look on the bright side of life and to get involved in things to help others," she said.

"Dale was the most generous man I ever met and the most influential man I ever knew," she said.

Link is remembered very fondly by the faculty and members of the department where he worked.

"He was a very nice fellow," said Rolf Larsen, department director for evening classes in continuing education. "I liked him a lot because of the way he handled his difficulty."

"He could hear enough to converse with you. I loved the way he crafted words in interesting combinations. He had enormous faith that things would be OK no matter what your challenges were.

"Dale is just one of those great people you meet once in a lifetime. He left a big impression on me, because he showed that you can have a great influence on people whatever your handicap is," Larsen said.

Larsen also said Link was a major contributor to the ASL program at BYU.

He was also a good instructor who knew his material well.

"Dale was a friend to everybody. He had something to share and contribute with everyone," said Chris Wakeland, a member of Dale's ward bishopric.

Jeff Born, a family friend who has known Dale since he was a missionary, said, "I appreciated his depth of understanding. Also his willingness to accept whatever the Lord was going to pass his way including his cancer."

"He was humorous, always making people laugh," said Belinda Luke, 19, a dietetics student from Houston.

Fire breaks out on cruise ship

Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Black smoke billowed Monday from the stern of a Carnival cruise ship two miles off shore before crews were able to contain a blaze which sent flames shooting from portholes.

No injuries were immediately reported and a tugboat pulled the Ecstasy back to Miami after the fire appeared to be contained about two hours after it was reported.

The ship, with nearly 3,000 aboard, was bound for Cozumel, Mexico.

Long plumes of water spewed from hoses aboard tug boats as the flames blackened the sides and rear of the ship, which had just set out on a four-day trip. The first stop was to be Key West.

"We are fortunate the Ecstasy is close to shore," said U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Marcus Woodring.

Although the smoke had vanished, the ship's officers announced that passengers were not to take off their life vests, passenger George Gonzalez told WSVN-TV.

Another passenger, Roger Sevalski, told the station: "At first there was a little bit of panic, but now it's OK."

The ocean liner, which is owned by Miami-based Carnival Corp., has 10 decks and can hold 2,040 passengers. It has a regular crew of 920.

A fire in an electronic control room aboard Carnival's cruise ship Celebration in June 1995 left the ship without main power and adrift just southeast of the Bahamian island of San Salvador. Carnival dispatched Ecstasy to rescue the more than 2,500 people aboard.

Summertime Casualties

As all over Utah
fire fighters busy

By JANAE HUBBLE

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Firefighters worked around the clock over the weekend to battle fires across the state, including in Utah County. In one case, a fire marshal for Utah County, said a 56-acre fire started around 6 p.m. Saturday in Spanish Fork.

Clark, public affairs officer for the U.S. Forest Service, said one helicopter and about 100 firefighters were battling the flames Sunday. No injuries were reported. The fire was contained at 6 a.m. Sunday morning and firefighters are still working hard to contain it.

"The fire was determined to be human-caused, but it is still uncertain whether the fire was accidental or deliberate," Clark said.

Firefighters had to battle more than just fire. In one case, a U.S. Forest Service firefighter out of the Grand Grove ranger's station, said firefighters were battling a beehive fire.

Clark said 13 beehives got knocked over when (firefighters) arrived on the scene. The bees were pretty angry and their hives were knocked over," Bramwell said.

The fire, the largest in the area, took place just west of Spanish Fork.

The fire was contained Sunday night by city engines, burning 800 acres," Clark said. The fire burned 13 small fires in the Spanish Fork District, 17 in the Cedar City District and six in the Panguitch District. The largest blaze in the state was in the Panguitch District, burning 7,300 acres.

Temperatures will cool slightly during the next week, but thunderstorm activity should go up, causing the danger, the National Weather Service said.

A combination could cause more actual starts, but the rain with these thunderstorms should help. The forecast is a mixed blessing for the fire. Pete Wilensky, National Weather Service meteorologist.

Texas is hardest hit by deadly heat wave

Associated Press

DALLAS — Deputies headed into remote neighborhoods with bottled water and electric fans on Monday to prevent more fatalities in a heat wave blamed for at least 117 deaths across the country.

"It's time for someone to literally go door to door to check on the safety and welfare of the citizens we serve," Dallas County Sheriff Jim Bowles said.

The temperature in Dallas hit 100 degrees for a 15th straight day. The heat has claimed 81 lives in Texas, including 43 illegal immigrants who had crossed the border from Mexico.

The weather has also contributed to at least 22 deaths in Louisiana, 11 in Oklahoma and one each in California, Arizona and Missouri. Temperatures hit 102 degrees in parts of Oklahoma on Monday.

Most people visited by Dallas County deputies were in unincorporated areas of the county outside city or town limits. Some live in mobile homes with no water or sewage systems.

"In many cases, these are almost forgotten enclaves of disadvantaged citizens," Bowles said. "Many are elderly. Some don't even have telephones to call for assistance."

Bowles estimated that 10,000 people live in the unincorporated areas. Deputies were also checking on pets and livestock.

Other states were coping with the heat as well. In Iowa, temperatures were in the 90s by early afternoon and expected to climb as high as 105 in some areas.

"It's hot here, but I think it's hot everywhere," said Tom Elverum, a foreman with Central Asphalt Paving of Des Moines, as he and a crew worked near Saylorsville Lake.

"We keep plenty of water around," Elverum said. "We never had a man go down from the heat, but there have been times we could've lost someone had we not taken it easy."

In Oklahoma, fans and mist-spraying devices ran full blast at poultry houses in the eastern part of the state to keep birds cool. Chickens have died by the thousands in the past few weeks, according to unconfirmed reports. No official count was available.

Utahns give Howard Jones a reason to keep returning

It was the faces of the fans that inspired the cover for singer/songwriter Howard Jones' newest album, "People." Jones had a chance to meet some of those people Friday night in Utah Valley.

Crowds lined up at Media Play in Orem, where Jones was signing autographs in connection with his Saturday night concert at The Canyons — his first Utah concert in nine years.

"I've been coming to Utah since 1984 and I must have played here about 10 times, and I've just had the most incredible response," Jones said in an interview with The Universe.

"This is one of my favorite places to play in the world without a doubt. I just hope I can keep coming back," he said.

"We're really excited to have Howard with us today. He's one of our biggest singers. He draws the biggest crowds and people love to see him," said Katie Holley, assistant music manager at Media Play. "They line up at 2 o'clock when he's not supposed to be here till 5 p.m."

With some fans waiting in line for as long as three hours, General Manager Kyle Hales said he estimated there were at least 800 people waiting for Jones' autograph.

"(Jones) does not do in-stores. He only does it in Utah because he likes the market and they like him," Hales said.

Jones said it is important to him to write songs that are relevant to people's lives.

phone on the crowd, who would sing their favorites themselves.

Jones taught the crowd the chorus of one of his new songs so they could sing along. "It's in my usual style, lots of 'wo wo's'," he said.

He put a new twist on "New Song" which the crowd seemed to like. And he sang "Life in One Day" with only acoustic guitars as his accompaniment.

If the crowd on Saturday night was any indication, his new album will be a hit.

Zack Westphal, Jones' music manager, said Jones has always been popular in Utah. "They like him because he produces clean music," he said.

Mem proposes neighborhood councils to handle concerns

By ANA KLEVEN

NewsNet Staff Writer

Residents want to start a program to make it easier for residents to voice their concerns and ideas.

What we needed to have was neighborhood involvement," said Bell, Orem City Council member.

The mayor and the City Council commissioned an ad hoc committee to study the idea of neighborhood organizations and to make recommendations.

The committee was to get a committee to study the idea of neighborhood organizations and to make recommendations.

The committee was to get a committee to study the idea of neighborhood organizations and to make recommendations.

made some promises that there would be greater citizen involvement in community decisions on a neighborhood level," said Jerry Washburn, chair of the study by the Neighborhood Advisory Ad Hoc Committee.

According to the study, Orem City had once considered neighborhood committees back in 1980, but the idea was rejected.

The 1980 study recommended against such organizations, stating that "the problems potentially available through neighborhood committees were of greater risk than benefit."

According to the 1998 study, the former objections centered around the fear that neighborhood organizations would usurp and wield competitive power against city government.

The 1998 committee, however, does not share the same concerns.

"The benefits outweigh the risks," the committee said in the study on neighborhood organizations.

For Bell, problems which arose from development around neighborhoods moved the idea of neighborhood councils forward.

"For me, the Harmon's (grocery store development) was kind of the catalyst of it all," Bell said. "The development of 800 North seemed to kind of blind-side the neighbors a great deal. There has just been too many times where a development has happened and the neighbors weren't aware of it."

The University Mall expansion is another development that caught neighbors off guard.

"When we first learned about it and tried to respond to it, we were a fly in the ointment," said Paul Edwards, a resident spokesman for some of the mall neighbors.

Edwards said he is in favor of neighborhood organizations.

"I think it's a very important development that provides a structure for citizen input that hasn't been there in the past," he said.

Edwards also said that this kind of reform helps concerned citizens have a voice at the beginning of a development approval, rather than appearing as agitators at the end of the process.

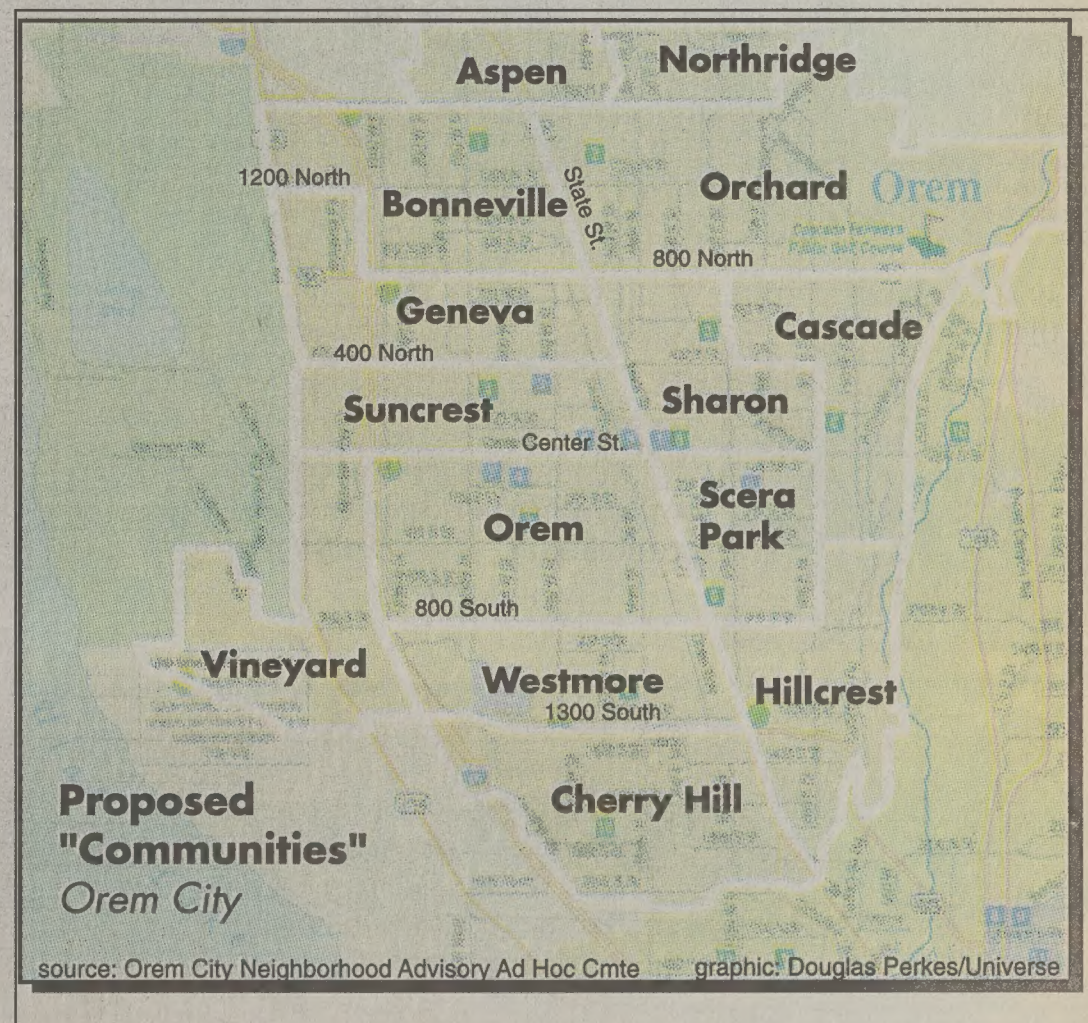

"Initially ... our response was to show up at the city chambers with signs, loud voices and sharp attitudes because we were responding to a crisis. Had there been this kind of organization (neighborhood organizations) in place, I think we wouldn't have been people appearing at the last minute in the process," he said.

But neighbor/developer problems are only part of the issue when it comes to the creation of neighborhood organizations, Washburn said.

"I would say that would be one example of where citizens may be frustrated. It's not just as a reaction against developers," Washburn said. "That may be one benefit from it, but we don't see that as the only, nor even the greatest, benefit from it."

Washburn said the proposed neighborhood organizations would divide the city of Orem into 15 communities and from there into around 50 neighborhoods, each headed by a neighborhood chair.

Burger King pulls 'Small Soldiers' toy

SPRINGFIELD, Ore. — Local Burger King restaurants have stopped selling a toy action figure whose body is part gun, because the toy's name — Kip Killigan — could arouse memories of a boy charged with killing his parents and two high school classmates.

The name of the toy, part of the promotion for the movie "Small Soldiers," sounds similar to Kip Kinkel, 15.

Kinkel is accused of killing two students and wounding two dozen others at Thurston High School on May 21. He also allegedly killed his parents the previous day.

Most store managers would not discuss the issue on the record, but one said a memo was sent out to 11 Springfield-area stores instructing them to stop including the movie's Killigan character in the new line of Kids' Club Meal toys.

The decision was made by the local franchise holder, Eberly Franchise Group of Eugene, Burger King Corp., spokeswoman Kim Miller said at company headquarters Monday.

The PG-13 rating for "Small Soldiers," instead of a PG rating, spurred Burger King to switch commercials to prime time and drop the "Kids Club" logo from tie-in packaging.

Oxford offers classes over the Internet

OXFORD, England — Oxford University will offer courses over the Internet for the first time, with the help of a grant from Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen.

Britain's oldest university said that starting next January, students will be able to take two online courses run by its Department for Continuing Education.

"These are free-standing courses, and not part of a full degree course," said Jonathan Darby, director of the department's Technology-Assisted Lifelong Learning program.

One course, offered to second-year undergraduates, will appeal to students who want to use computers more effectively or are considering a career change to computing, the university said.

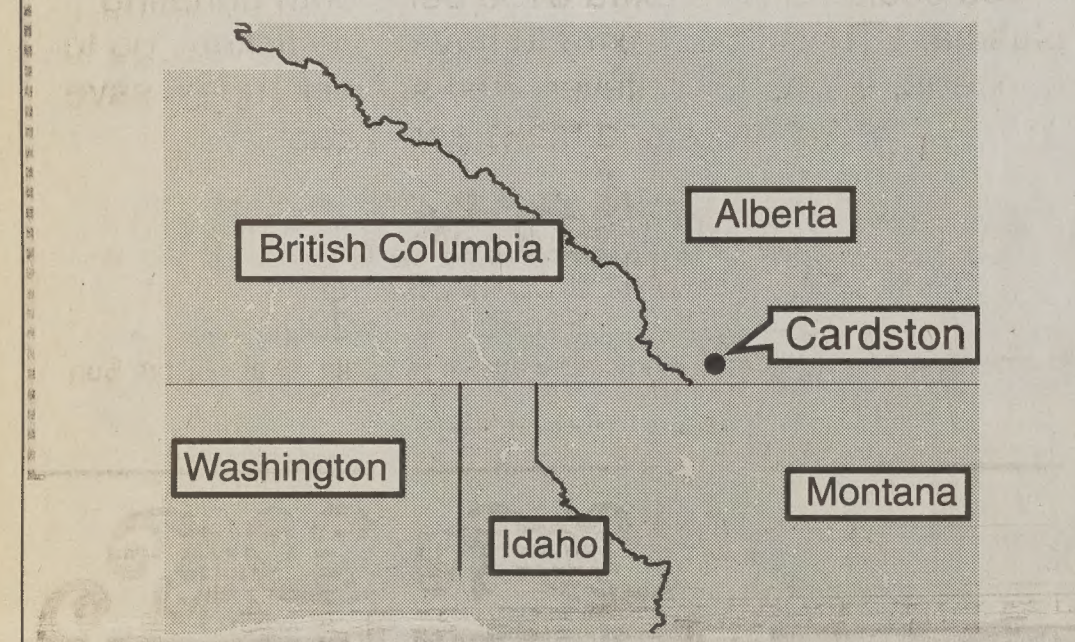

The other, a third-year undergraduate-level course, offers practical training in the use of databases by historians. It examines original data from the Oxfordshire towns of Thame and Woodstock in the 17th century.

The venture is backed by an $820,000 grant from the Paul Allen Virtual Education Foundation, based in Washington state. With Bill Gates, Allen founded the computer giant Microsoft.

Saturn workers vote to strike

Associated Press

SPRING HILL, Tenn. — Workers at General Motors' only U.S. plant still turning out cars — the Saturn division, where the company boasts of harmonious labor-management relations — voted overwhelmingly to authorize a strike.

"We can't continue to live a lie that this partnership is alive and healthy and well when it's not," said Mike Bennett, bargaining chairman for the union local at Saturn Corp.

The strike-authorization vote Sunday was another blow to the strike-crippled automaker. Talks between the union and the company resumed Monday at one strikebound Flint parts plant, the Delphi Flint East plant, while talks at the Flint Metal Center and at the Saturn plant were both in recess until today.

Saturn promotes itself as "a different kind of car company."

It uses a team approach in the factory and has a reputation for strong management-employee relations.

Of the more than 5,000 Saturn workers who cast ballots, 96 percent voted for strike authorization. A strike technically could be called by the end of the week.

The UAW often authorizes strikes to put pressure on management during negotiations. The union has obtained authorizations in recent months to call strikes at an assembly plant in Flint and three parts plants in Dayton, Ohio, and Indianapolis but has yet to order walkouts there.

Saturn President Don Hudler played down the vote, saying it does not indicate a strike is imminent. He said Saturn will maintain its operating schedule and continue turning out cars.

"We recognize we have critical issues to work through," Hudler said. "We will continue to talk through each one of them and resolve issues as we've always done in the past — in the spirit of partnership."

Mike Bennett, shop chairman for the Saturn plant's UAW local, also said he doubted a strike would be called there within the next 30 days. He spoke in Flint, where he was attending a meeting for local union officials.

The vote came four months after dissident employees forced a referendum on their unique contract with GM. Workers voted overwhelmingly to keep the "risk-and-reward" contract rather than abandon it for the contract all other UAW workers have.

Under the "risk-and-reward" pay program, employees average about 12 percent less than GM's other workers but can add a lot by hitting certain goals.

In earlier years, annual bonuses reached about $4,000, but last year, because GM's GM counterparts. Last year, because cars were made as a result of shrinking sales, was about $4,000 less.

Now, union officials say Saturn is shoring up workers for their second-quarter effort. Officials say workers are owed a $1,400 bonus, the company plans to pay only $390.

"We figured our days of strike and conflict in the past by coming to Spring Hill, ... warning shot and a signal to management serious about having a partnership," said Ron, a floor leader at Saturn who voted for authorization.

Saturn workers are concerned about cuts from work being sent to other plants, bonus pay and a decreasing role in management decisions.

"They're walking all over us," workers said. "It's time to show some muscle."

Civil suit is filed in gondola deaths

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The family of two Polish citizens killed when a U.S. Marine jet severed an Italian ski gondola cable filed a civil claim Monday for more than $10 million from NATO, Italy and the United States.

The attorney in the case also pleaded with the U.S. government to waive its immunity and directly compensate the families of 20 victims of the February accident, who under a NATO treaty can only seek damages through Italian authorities in a process that can take years.

"We believe America should set an example for the rest of the world and settle this matter fairly and expeditiously," said John Eaves Jr., who represents Peter Strzelczyk, whose wife and son were killed.

The Clinton administration has sought a $20 million authorization from Congress to pay property damages in the case.

"Unfortunately, money has so far been budgeted for twisted metal, but nothing for twisted bodies and lost lives," Eaves said.

The EA-6B Prowler jet sliced through the gondola cable Feb. 3 during a routine training mission in the Italian Alps, sending 20 people to their deaths in a 350-foot plunge.

The jet was flying about 370 feet off the ground, according to investigators, despite a 2,000-foot minimum altitude requirement.

Earlier this month, a general ordered the pilot, Capt. Richard J. Ashby, and the navigator, Capt. Joseph P. Schweitzer, tried for manslaughter at a court-martial. Charges were dismissed against two other crew members.

Ashby and Schweitzer, both 30, are accused of hot-dogging through the mountain pass to cause the accident. They could get up to life in prison.

Attorney Eaves of Jackson, Miss., represents seven families and nine victims, including Ewa Strzelczyk, 37, and her son Filip, 12. Eaves said he also plans to file civil claims soon for the other families against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Italian Ministry of Defense and the United States.

An attorney representing five Belgian citizens killed in the accident said families already have begun seeking tens of millions of dollars in direct damages from the United States through an administrative process.

Attorney Robert Cahill said the civil claims were filed a few weeks ago with the Defense Department. He said if the U.S. government doesn't agree to compensate the families a federal court lawsuit will follow.

"We don't agree that (the NATO treaty) prevents an action here in the United States against the federal government," Cahill said. "Given what happened, there is a clear-cut U.S. Liability."

Cahill wouldn't say how much each family is seeking, but he said it was about the same as the $5 million each in Strzelczyk case. The U.S. government hasn't responded to the plea for civil damages, he said.

Both attorneys said the families are seeking direct U.S. compensation because filing civil claims through NATO and the Italian court system can take eight to 10 years if all goes well.

The Belgian victims were: Stefan Beckaert, 28; Stefaan Vermader, 27; Marie-Rose Eyskens, 24; Sebastiaan van den Heede, 27; Eyskens' boyfriend; and Hadewich Anthonissen, 24.

The Justice Department did not return a call seeking comment.

HMO debate flares with monster ads

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A frustrated nurse goes up against Frankenstein's monster this week in a battle of ads coming at Americans as Congress prepares to debate new rules on health plans.

"These bureaucrats from the insurance companies: They routinely deny care and they make decisions that only doctors should be making," said Chicago nurse Lynn Pius in a one million-dollar radio and TV ad campaign sponsored by the AFL-CIO.

"Washington should be careful how it plays doctor," counters a radio ad sponsored by The Health Benefits Coalition, which includes some of the nation's largest health insurers and business groups, such as the National Association of Manufacturers.

In the radio ad, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a lead sponsor of a "patients' rights" bill supported by congressional Democrats and President Clinton, is portrayed as a bumbling, mad scientist.

"Our creation is reviving," says a voice intended to be Kennedy's that then sounds horrified at what he has created. "Oh no! Frankenstein's monster!"

It's all part of a big-money lobbying fight between labor and consumer groups on one side — who want federal mandates to protect patients from health plan restrictions — and insurance companies and employers on the other, who argue that new rules would make health benefits unaffordable.

Clinton has helped Democratic lawmakers make a "patients' bill of rights" a top priority in Congress. On Capitol Hill this week, Republicans responded by introducing their own debate could begin as soon as next week.

Although the competition varies widely on the specifics offered and to whom, both Democrats and Republicans are new guarantees for millions of Americans when they use the insurance.

Among their differences, Democrats support and most Republicans oppose lifting a federal law that currently protects many plans from high-stakes lawsuits.

That prompted 1,000 bills — including Mobil Corp., Eastman Kodak Co. and Packard — to sign a letter day to members of Congress. "We would have a choice but to reduce the increase premiums and pocket costs, or elimination" if patients' rights to expanded.

At the same time, consumer groups are flooding Congress with fax machines with graphs about Americans harmed by plan decisions but unable to do anything more than the current treatment they couldn't get.

"We recommended that Orem City be divided into 15 communities that would roughly correspond with elementary school districts," Washburn said.

The hope is that residents will take advantage of the new system. "The city is going to be the one that orchestrates it, but not run it," Bell said. "In order for it to work, in my opinion, it has got to be run by the neighbors."

Washburn agrees with Bell's ideas. "Instead of trying to just establish a network of communication, we envision that the neighborhoods would be groups of concerned citizens who, primarily, would be their own problem solvers," Washburn said.

The liaison between the city and the neighborhoods would be a city facilitator, he said.

Washburn thinks that the facilitator would play an important role in making the establishment a success.

"The key to it is having an excellent city facilitator who is very neighborhood-minded and citizen/community-minded, who can help train these people and give them the vision of what they can do," Washburn said.

Mary Ellen W. Smoot, Relief Society President for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, received the 1998 BYU Exemplary Womanhood Award at an awards banquet hosted by the university.

Smoot is a woman who the Christ-like principles upon which BYU and the church are founded and who gives service to the church, community and the university.

Smoot, there have been occasions in which you have been a pioneer," Brian Bowers, president of BYUSA, said Thursday at the awards banquet. "We are proud of your pioneering spirit and example. You have inspired us to live with greatness and worthy aspirations. Most of all, you have taught us to follow in our Lord Jesus Christ and prepare for service in the kingdom of God."

Smoot now joins a list of women including Marjorie Lee, Flora Benson, and Patricia Holland.

"If you hear her speak or see the direction she has given the Relief Society, it is very and very impactful to individuals."

The award is annually rotated between the Exemplary Manhood Award and the Exemplary Womanhood Award.

Smoot chose to give the award to NGO Family Voice. Family Voice is a non-governmental organization that seeks to strengthen the strength of families worldwide through the World of Families. NGO strives to provide legislative and legal documentation to numerous countries to protect the rights of families.

church, the community and the university.

"She is kind of like the Savior in a way. She ministers to the one," said Shauna Essig, President Smoot's daughter. "Every single person is a treasure, and she wants everyone to realize their importance to the Lord."

After the banquet, President Smoot spoke on the importance of each individual life in the LDS Church.

"I would hope that in your life, individually and collectively you would realize how important you are to the future of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," she said. "It doesn't matter who our father is, who our mother is, if we are single or married. It does not matter. None of that matters. What matters is what we determine to do with our individual lives."

She has served the community on the board of the South Davis Community Hospital and on the board of the local chapter of the United Way. She was the organizer of the Centerville Historical Society and wrote the history of Centerville.

Born in Ogden and raised in Clearfield, President Smoot is the fifth of six daughters. She is married to Stanley M. Smoot, and they have seven children and 46 grandchildren.

Her service in the LDS Church has ranged from being a member of the editorial board of The Friend magazine to a Relief Society president and a member of the LDS Church Curriculum Writing Committee.

In 1983, her husband was called to serve as mission president in the Ohio Columbus Mission. After one year he was called to open the Ohio Akron Mission, where they developed their great love for public affairs.

Until her call as Relief Society General President in April 1997, President Smoot and her husband served as directors of church history for seven years.

The relationship between charity and knowledge will be addressed at 11 a.m. today by BYU law professor Kevin J. Worthen in the JSB Auditorium.

"Charity can make us more knowledgeable, and knowledge can make us more charitable," Worthen said. "I have always been interested in the relationship between knowledge and other virtues, and how the gospel perspective can help us understand what and how we know."

Worthen joined the BYU faculty at the J. Reuben Clark Law School in 1987. He teaches courses in state and local government, legislation and federal Indian law.

Worthen is the youngest of four children and native of Carbon County. He is married to the former Peggy Sealey, and they are the parents of two sons and a daughter.

He received an associate degree from the College of Eastern Utah, where he was co-captain of the basketball team and valedictorian. He earned his bachelor's degree in political science and his juris doctorate from BYU. After graduation he served as law clerk first to Judge Malcom R. Wilkey of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and then to Justice Byron R. White of the U.S. Supreme Court.

In addition to being an avid sports fan, Worthen also likes to read. He said his desire for knowledge was influenced by the example of his older siblings.

The Devotional will be broadcast on KBYU-TV (Channel 11) and KBYU-FM (89.1), as well as in the Varsity Theatre and 2084 JKHB.

Student Revina Largo is a recipient of relief and cried out her name on the list of the Udall scholarship; her way to realizing her dream of becoming a doctor.

The scholarship will help me pay for my education at the University of Arizona," said Largo, a student in Albuquerque, N.M., studying zoology. The Morris K. Udall Scholarship Award is given to the former Arizona congress and the first BYU student to receive the Udall scholarship and "we are proud that we will have many more to follow." Steven E. Benzley, associate director of General Education and is preparing to apply to the school and will be in Tucson, Ariz. to receive her award Aug. 6.

Largo was very nervous, relieved and happy. It was a last minute application to ask for an extension to said on finding out the award in May.

Largo plans on returning to the University of Arizona in New Mexico as a zoologist. She said that her people can see the importance and realize "they can achieve their goals and raise their children."

Largo said. "I need doctors who are willing to help. Most of the doctors at the Indian Health Service hospitals do not speak Navajo because they are not Indian. It is always hard to see differences," Largo said.

Largo said strong family support and a desire for excellence in education instilled within me the importance of education. She helped me to succeed a college education and a better lifestyle," Largo said. According to the news release, Largo is a Navajo reservation, about 200 miles west of Phoenix, Ariz. She was inspired by her older sister's example to join the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Indian placement program in 1990. The program places Navajo students with foster families where they will have greater educational opportunities.

Largo said it can be frustrating to be a Navajo student in BYU, but she is enjoying the sharing and helping others understand my culture was a responsibility of being an Indian student in BYU."

Largo also helped organize the Cedartree Memorial Lecture Series, which is held annually at BYU in Provo.

Largo is a member of the Navajo Nation and is currently a student at the University of Arizona.

Springville's adaptation offers humor and drama

By SEAN BROWN

The Villa Playhouse Theatre performed its version of "The Wizard of Oz" Saturday night.

The play brought to life childhood heroes such as Dorothy, Toto and the Scarecrow. The play, directed by Robin Booth and written by L. Frank Baum, was both magical and imaginative.

Booth did an excellent job coordinating all the different elements of humor, suspense and drama; making it entertaining for both young and old.

Although the play was slow in some parts, the overall effect was positive as Dorothy chased her dreams down the yellow brick road.

Dorothy, played by Rebecca Law, seemed melodramatic in parts but did a good job considering she had a dog next to her throughout the play.

Excellent performances were turned in by the Scarecrow, played by Bradin Wilhelmsen; the Cowardly Lion, played by Don Green; and the Tinman, played by Matt Law. They all had strong voices and added good character to their parts.

The costumes weren't Broadway but were quite impressive for a community theater production. Especially detailed and professional was the Tinman's costume, as the clanking of the tin added a believable touch to the performance.

Glinda, the Good Witch of the North, played by Alana Tucker, was difficult to hear in parts. The Wicked Witch of the West, played by Marni Ashby, did a wonderful job of laugh and voice work.

Ashby was also in charge of more than 50 children's ferent parts. The children's only entertaining, but with an amazing ability to dance.

The children's choreography was very creative.

The play was double cast for the children. Even Toto was cast.

Kenneth Cope releases album at party

By JENNY STATHIS

jenny@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Recording artist Kenneth Cope premiered his "Stories from Eden's Garden" album at a release concert Wednesday at 8 p.m.

The exclusive pre-release event was at the Salt Lake Community College Grand Theater in Salt Lake City.

The album will be released today in music stores.

Jeff Simpson, president of Excel Records, introduced Cope to the audience of press and personal friends.

"These songs are real personal to Kenneth, and as he played them for us, they affected us the same way," Simpson said.

In comparison to prior albums, Cope decided to record songs with personal meaning and focus, rather than singing about others' lives.

"A lot of things have transpired in my life in the past few years. All of these emotions and family ties have inspired me to create," Cope said.

Cope told the audience of the inspiration for his newest album.

"This album started out being called Eden's Garden," named after my daughter Eden. But I ended up changing it to Stories from Eden's Garden," he said. "All the songs seem to talk about the earth. My mind went back to the people who first knew this earth."

Cope went on to play a song titled "Ondi-Ahman."

After playing five of 10 songs, his tune changed a little.

"This song moves a little, so if you feel like clappin' your hands, stompin' your feet and singin' along, don't — it bugs me," he said with a laugh.

Toward the end of his performance, Cope introduced his back-up singer, Kathryn Nelson.

"I want to introduce Kathryn Nelson, who is the only girl up here. She sent me a tape about two years ago, and she amazed me," he said.

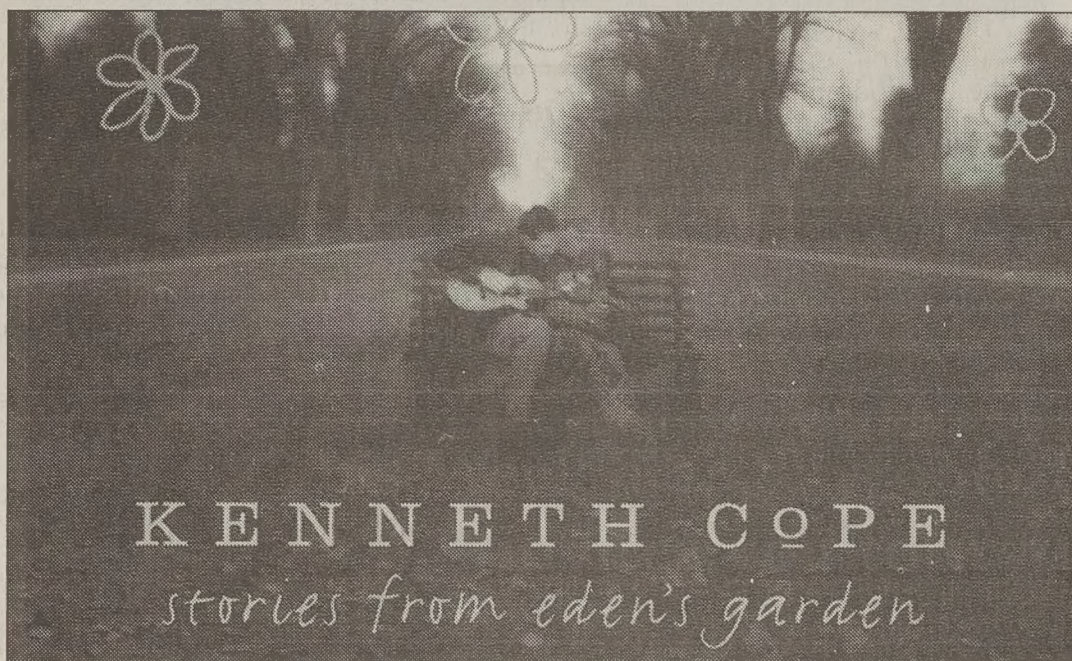

"Right," Nelson replied.

"So I made her the backup artist for this album," Cope said.

Cope told the story behind each song: "When babies come to us, it's almost like they know something we don't. You can see it in their eyes. This song is called 'Old Eyes,'" Cope said.

"Whenever two people get married, they're taking a huge chance. You never know if, say, 20 years down the road, things will be the same.

"I wrote a song for my wife, and I sprung it on her a few nights ago. She was grateful I didn't spring it on her tonight. This is called 'How Could I Have Known?'" Cope said.

Kenneth Cope's CD "Stories from Eden's Garden" will be released today. The LDS artist gave friends an album preview concert Wednesday at Salt Lake Community College.

'Yogatopia' attracts celebrities

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Life in Tinseltown can be tough. Your agent can't cut a deal, Spielberg's still holding on line one and if the paparazzi don't maim you, the critics will.

Peer out from the limo, the freeway's a mess. It's all about stress. You must decompress.

The place: Yogatopia, a minimalist enclave in Brentwood, Calif. Past white gauze curtains and on a blond wood floor, Elizabeth Berkley looks graceful in a handstand, Dennis Quaid is stretching his mind and body with a split and Woody Harrelson is perfecting a pose, legs behind head.

Yogatopia is "pretty star-studded" with "tons of TV and movie people," said co-owner Steve Ross, 46.

But forget the star factor, said Ross and his partner Rod Stryker, 40, both natives of Los Angeles. "As much as this is newsworthy, in class they become anonymous," Stryker said.

Well, not totally anonymous. Stryker's new bride is, after all, '70s supermodel Cheryl Tiegs, who attends class three times a week and met him — where else? — at a yoga class.

"Whether it's Goldie (Hawn) or Cheryl, once they get in there, the whole idea is to drop all that and blend in. The focus is for them to forget their celebrity and unwind," Stryker said.

Still, "The day John John showed up, there was a kind of buzz," Stryker said, recalling last September when John F. Kennedy Jr. took Ross' mixed-level Saturday evening class.

"People didn't know whether to notice him or do their yoga," Stryker said. "Or figure out how to do both."

Ross, who's done house calls for Kirstie Alley, Courtney Love and Richard Gere, teaches athletic-style yoga classes. Stryker practices more traditional yoga, focusing on controlled breathing, stretching, visualization and meditation.

What draws the stars to yoga? "It's definitely a life under the microscope, and the stakes are very high. Most of the people who excel in those careers are extremely creative, yet on the other hand, the industry itself is very callous," Stryker said.

ILB expansion team may come to SLC

By WENDELL WOOD
wendell@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

"Buzz" word in Salt Lake City weekend is Major League baseball. No, Salt Lake Buzz owner Buzas has not petitioned for an expansion team yet, but Utahns may see the Minnesota/Charlotte team a lot closer next year.

Buzas, who have been on fire in continued their winning ways Saturday and Sunday against Las Vegas Stars at Franklin Covey Field.

Friday, Marc Lewis didn't want another 17-inning game like the Buzz had earlier in the week. So he hit two outs in the bottom of the ninth, Lewis hit a game winning single that scored Brian Buzas as the Buzz beat the Stars 4-1.

Friday night the Buzz found themselves back in familiar territory. The Moriarty scored on a wild pitch in the eighth inning to give the team their fourth consecutive win at Franklin Covey Field.

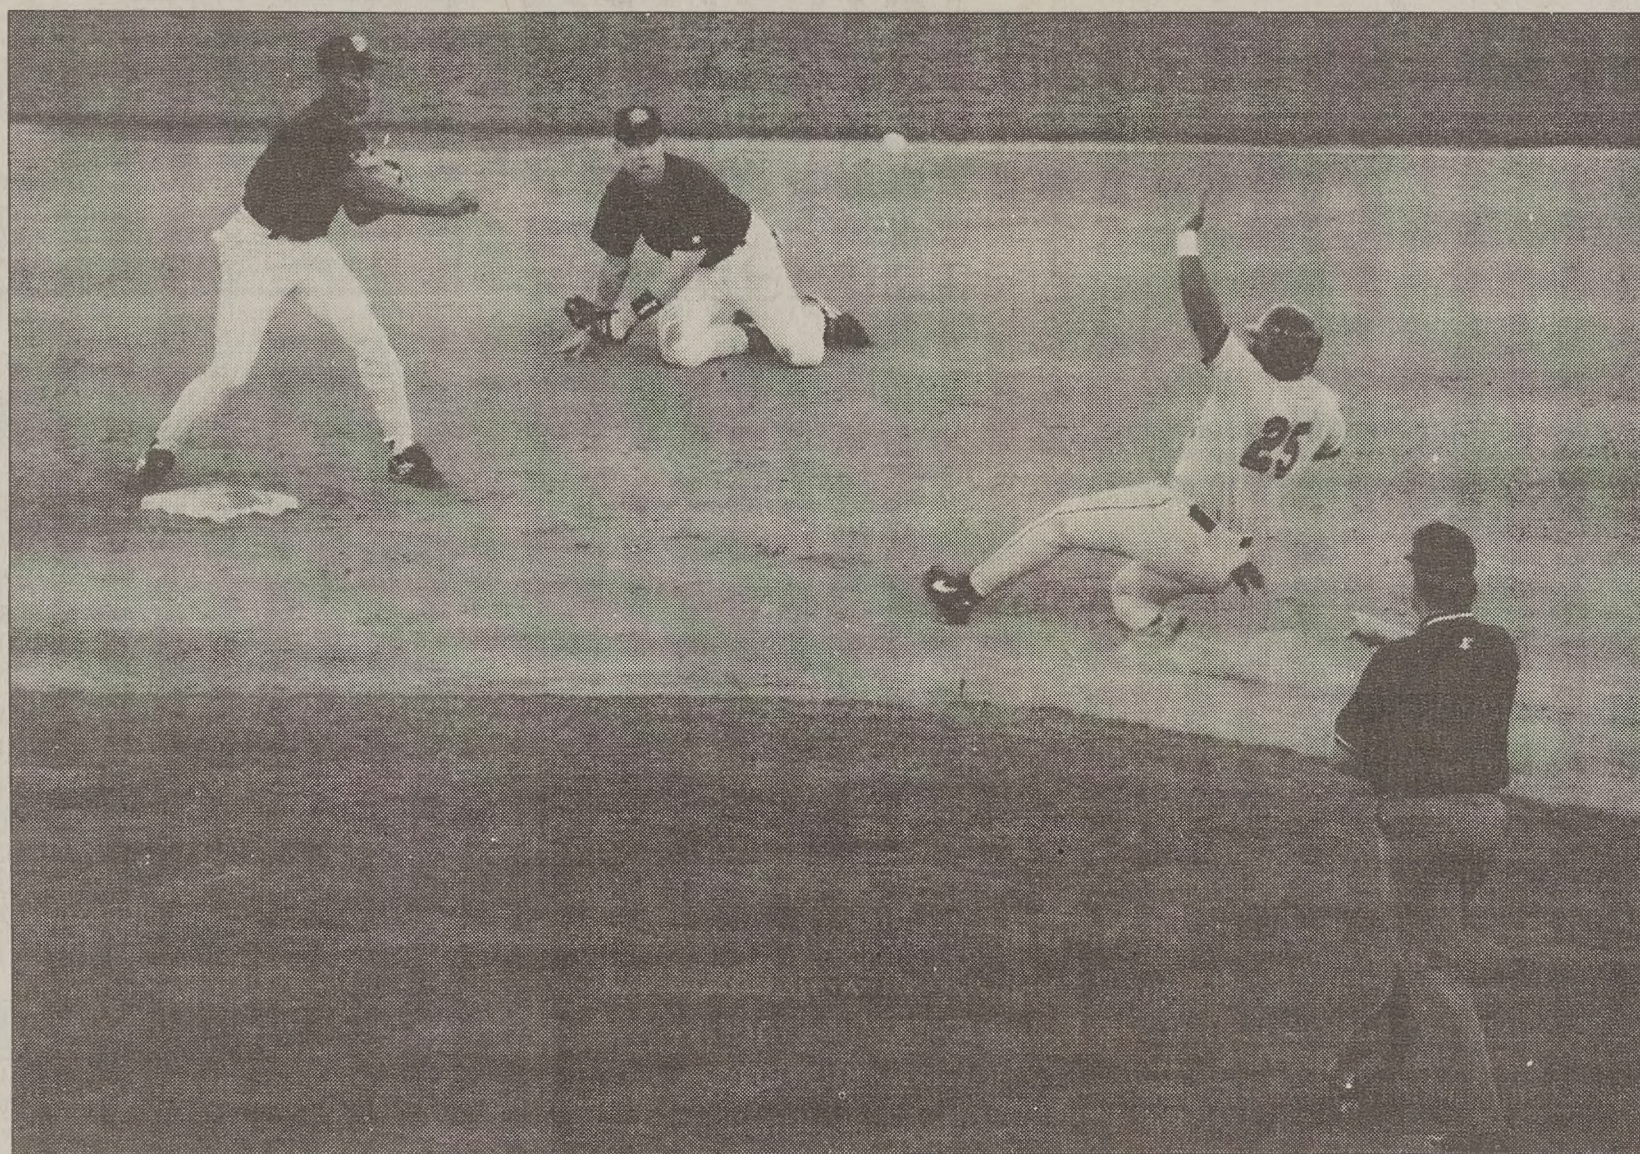

Friday, Buzas was back at it Sunday. He hit a home run in the sixth and came back in the ninth to knock in the game winning run with two outs and the bases loaded. The Buzz won 4-3 victory over the Stars, their third consecutive win.

At the All-Star Break, the Buzz won 8 of 11 and gained four games on the Pacific Coast League.

Big news came Friday. It was said in Minnesota that a group of businessmen who are trying to buy the Minnesota team and move it to Salt Lake, are considering moving the team to Salt Lake for up to $10 million while a new baseball stadium is built.

Only other option would be to renovate minor league stadium in Provo.

However, even if the deal with the Stars falls through the Twins owners say they are interested in search for a temporary home. The only location being talked about to date would be building a new stadium in Provo. Hypothetically, the new location could attract a Class-A baseball team when the Buzz returned to Salt Lake. This is something that Buzas has been looking for.

Buzz owner Joe Buzas has been looking for a temporary home. The only location being talked about to date would be building a new stadium in Provo. Hypothetically, the new location could attract a Class-A baseball team when the Buzz returned to Salt Lake. This is something that Buzas has been looking for.

Since the All-Star break, the Buzz have won 8 of 11 and gained four games on the Pacific Coast League-leading Fresno Giants.

So what would that mean for the bying for.

Franklin Covey Stadium holds 15,000 seats. If the Twins were to come to Salt Lake, an estimated 5,000 seats would be added to the outfield area in order to accommodate more fans. This season the Twins have averaged 14,868 fans per game, which is far less than Metrodome capacity.

One potential disadvantage that comes with a big league team is big league ticket prices. The Buzz charge $5, $6 and $7 for game tickets. In order for Minnesota or Charlotte to survive financially it would have to charge prices in the range of $15-$30 per ticket.

Raiders sign top draft pick in time for training camp

Associated Press

ALAMEDA, Calif. — The Oakland Raiders signed Heisman Trophy winner Charles Woodson, their top pick in this year's draft, just a day before opening training camp.

"I told my agent when we first talked that I didn't want to be a holdout," said Woodson, a cornerback out of Michigan and the fourth overall pick in the draft.

Woodson will report on time to camp in Napa, Calif., tonight. His first practice will be Wednesday.

Neither the Raiders nor Woodson's agent, Carl Poston, would discuss terms of the contract on Monday, although both sides confirmed it included a signing bonus. ESPN reported the six-year deal was worth $14.5 million, with an $8 million signing bonus.

Woodson was the highest selection so far this year to come to terms with his team.

"There was a commitment from the very beginning," Poston said. "Charles made it clear and I made it clear that we wanted to get this deal done before camp."

After marathon negotiations over the past several days, the two sides said they pretty much came together at a barbecue held by Raiders head coach Jon Gruden on Sunday night. Woodson, who was with his family in Orlando, Fla., got the call to be on a plane Monday morning.

Woodson, 21, will be competing for the left cornerback job.

"I'm looking forward to getting in here and just being a sponge, learning as much as I can," he said.

The Raiders let go of cornerbacks Larry Brown and Terry McDaniel in the offseason in favor of Woodson and newcomer Eric Allen, a six-time Pro Bowler. Gruden also has tentatively moved 15-year veteran cornerback Albert Lewis to free safety.

Gruden, hired in the offseason after the Raiders went 4-12 last season, said Woodson has as good a chance as anyone else of earning a starting job.

"We're not reluctant at all. We don't discriminate because of age," said Gruden, 34, the former offensive coordinator for the Philadelphia Eagles. "I'm a rookie head coach."

Woodson, who entered the draft after his junior season, was the first predominantly defensive player to win the Heisman.

"I've never sat on the bench a day in my life, and I don't want to start now."

— Charles Woodson
Oakland Raiders

Last season, he had 41 tackles and seven interceptions. He also had 33 punt returns for 282 yards and a touchdown, 11 receptions for 231 yards and a touchdown, and three rushes for 15 yards and another score.

Woodson is the seventh Heisman Trophy winner to play for the Raiders, in a group with Tim Brown, Desmond Howard, Billy Cannon, Jim Plunkett, Marcus Allen and Bo Jackson.

"This young man has the capability to take the torch and become a great football player for us," Gruden said.

The Raiders have just one draft pick left unsigned, fourth-rounder Gennaro DiNapoli, an offensive lineman out of Virginia Tech.

All sides admitted Woodson's early signing would increase his chances of starting.

"I've never sat on the bench a day in my life," Woodson said. "And I don't want to start now."

A frustrating season: Starzz suffer losses

By SARA ANDERSON
sara@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

With a number of personnel changes and the addition of 7-foot-2 center Margo Dydek the Utah Starzz were looking forward to a bright 1998 season.

Now, as the 5-12 Starzz enter into the second half of the season, they realize they still have a lot to learn.

"It's frustrating," Dydek said. Dydek, who is averaging 12.8 points, 7.2 rebounds and 3.41 blocks per game does not understand why her team is struggling. "I'm not happy. We've worked a lot."

Although the Starzz have lost many close games, they are not giving up.

"We still have more games and anything can happen," Dydek said.

"It is a better team than last year," Utah coach Denise Taylor said. "We have more talent, we've got height and we are not losing by 20 points like we did last season. We've been in games and we have had opportunity to win games."

On Sunday the Starzz took advantage of their game against the league's worst team, beating the Washington Mystics 99-88 at the MCI Center.

Utah, who is in the middle of a 10-day road trip, dominated the first half going on a 19-0 run. The Starzz lead 47-25 at half.

Although Washington outscored Utah 63-52 in the second half, the Starzz were able to hold on and get a win.

The Starzz, who shot 56 percent from the floor, were lead by 6-2 forward Wendy Palmer. Palmer had 24 points and guard Kim Williams finished with 19.

The 2-14 Mystics were lead by Nikki McCray, who had a game-high 26 points. The win breaks Utah's four-game losing streak.

Utah suffered a big loss at the end of the first half when leading scorer Elena Baranova sprained her ankle. Baranova, who has been fighting Achilles tendinitis, is listed as day-to-day.

The Starzz were not as fortunate in their Friday night loss against the Detroit Shock, 74-67.

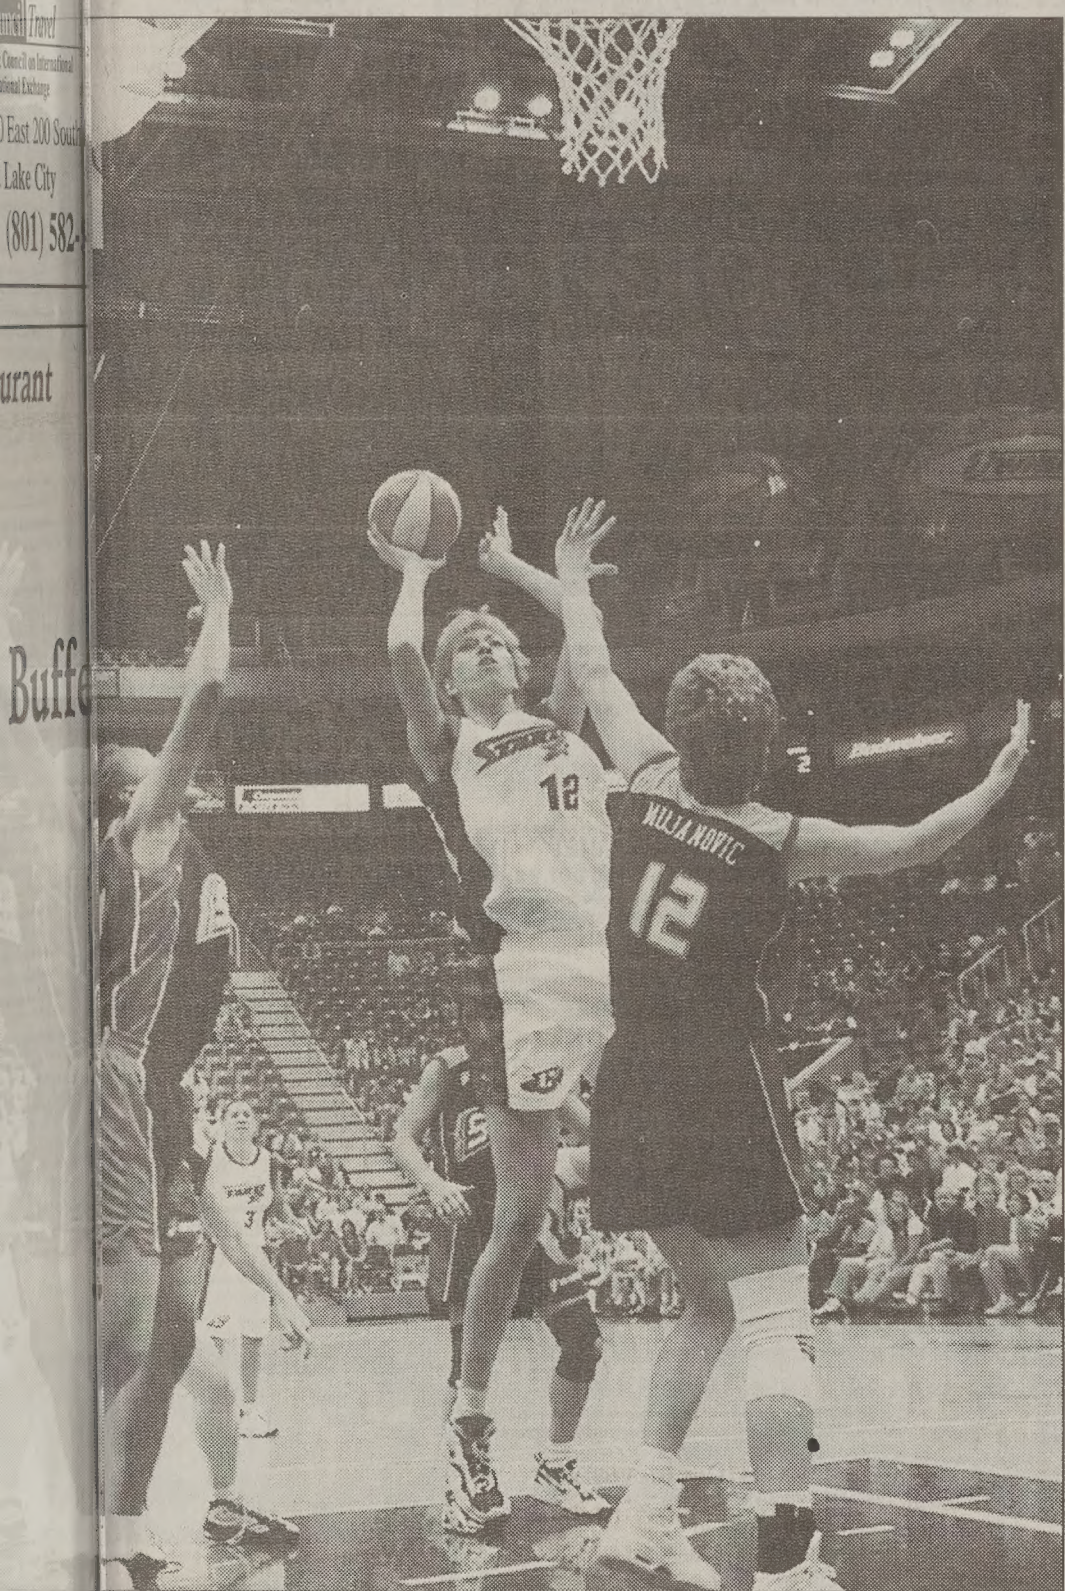

Utah, trying to avenge their 74-67 loss to the Shock, July 13, opened the game hitting 7-for-7 to take a 14-6 lead. Dydek scored 11 points and had six blocks in the first half to help the Starzz take a 37-33 half time lead.

But, just as they did in their previous meeting, Dydek and the Starzz cooled off and Detroit took control. The Shock outscored Utah 46-30 in the second half and won the game.

Dydek finished the night with 15 points and set a new WNBA record with eight blocked shots.

Utah acquired former Los Angeles Spark's guard Erin Alexander to fill the spot of Tammi Reiss. Reiss, who was placed on the injured reserve list on July 16 for a sprained ankle, is listed as day-to-day.

The Starzz will play the Charlotte Sting on Wednesday and then travel to Cleveland to face the Rockers on Saturday. The Starzz next home game will be Monday against the Phoenix Mercury.

Michael Brandy/Universe

Starzz center Margo Dydek uses her height to shoot over Detroit Shock center Razija Mujanovic during the Starzz's 74-67 loss to the Shock at the Delta Center July 13. The Starzz are 5-12 this season.

Utahns hesitant to rely on retirement system

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Few Utah residents are counting on Social Security to get them through their retirement, according to a new poll.

In all, 68 percent of Utah workers said they have little confidence that Social Security funds will be available when they enter retirement, the Deseret News reported in a copy-right poll.

"I think the older society is going to suffer a lot. A lot more people won't have retirement," said Stephanie Pace, a 19-year-old telephone operator at a Salt Lake hotel.

Most Utah residents don't have such a gloomy outlook. About 60 percent say that savings combined with Social Security will get them through their golden years.

Some 37 percent of Utahns save less than $2,500 a year for retirement, including money they put into individual retirement accounts. Nearly a quarter save between $2,500 and $5,000. Fifteen percent save more than $5,001 and 9 percent more than $10,000.

Sterling Jenson, president of First Security Investment Management, was not surprised by the lack of confidence Utah residents have.

"As it currently stands, I don't think there's any future (in the program)," Jenson said. "There will be Social Security, but not in its current form."

Experts have projected that Social Security could run out of money by 2032. Last month President Clinton called on Congress to take steps to extend the entitlement program's life.

More than a quarter of those surveyed in the Deseret News poll receive Social Security funds. Of those, three-quarters were confident or somewhat confident that funds would be available through their retirement.

The Deseret News poll was conducted by Dan Jones & Associates.

Civil War Gen. Pickett's grandson sells antiques for $87,500: duped?

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — It pays to know your history. Just ask George Pickett 5th.

Pickett is the great-great-grandson of Gen. George Pickett, who led the ill-fated charge during the Civil War's bloodiest battle. In November 1995, the general's descendant sold a trunk of keepsakes to Russ Pritchard, a respected antiques expert, for $87,500.

Two weeks later, Pritchard sold the items to the city of Harrisburg for $870,000 for its planned National Civil War Museum — and city officials considered that price a bargain.

Now, Pickett is suing Pritchard, saying the frequent guest on PBS' "The Antiques Road Show" duped him.

"I was totally naive, regrettably," Pickett told Sunday's Philadelphia Inquirer from his home in Wilmington, N.C.

Pritchard denies the charge, and says Pickett set the price himself.

"Any claim that we underappraised the items or defrauded (him) is simply untrue," Pritchard said in a statement released by his company, American Ordinance Preservation Association in Bryn Mawr.

Pickett inherited the antiques from his father and kept them in an attic trunk for years, until Pritchard came along.

Pritchard "said he was the expert, that there wasn't anybody better. I believed him....I said, 'If that's all they're worth, that's all they're worth,'" Pickett said.

Now that he knows their true value, Pickett wants his artifacts back, said his attorney, Gavin Lentz. But the city has no intention of returning the items, which were purchased for the $12 million museum, set to open by 2000.

"I guess the argument's been made that Pickett didn't do his own diligence in finding out what his stuff was really worth," said Randy King, a spokesman for Harrisburg Mayor Stephen R. Reed.

Clinton: 'Uniform' schools

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Offering America's teachers relief from troubled students, President Clinton Monday promoted wider use of school uniforms, tough curfews and anti-gun policies designed to restore "order in our children's lives" and discipline in schools.

Citing such measures as stricter curfews and the wider use of school uniforms, Clinton urged the teachers and their school districts to pursue "a new approach to restore discipline in our schools and order in our children's lives."

"We either have discipline in the classroom or we have disorder and, quite often, danger," Clinton said in an address to the national convention of the American Federation of Teachers.

"Teachers can't teach if they have to fight for respect, or fear for their safety," he said.

The speech was designed as a broad-brush defense of Clinton's education proposals, some of which are under attack in Congress, but its focus was on school discipline.

"While we've made great advances in reducing crime overall across the country, the president wants to reinforce the message of how crucial it is that schools are safe and that discipline is restored," White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said aboard Air Force One, en route to New Orleans from Clinton's three-day weekend stay in Arkansas.

With Washington's powers over education limited, Clinton was promoting successful programs in local communities. He told the AFT convention he was particularly impressed with a Milwaukee policy that allows police to stop and question youths on the streets during school hours.

Clinton said he reviewed new statistics that show three out of four students say they have trouble with disruptive classmates, and 81 percent of teachers say undisciplined students take up most of their time.

Little the president discussed Monday was new. But aides said he wanted to promote his school discipline package from the 1996 campaign, which includes suspending students who bring guns to school.

Clinton also announced he would lead a White House conference on school safety Oct. 15. He will proclaim that date "national school safety day." Coming just three weeks before Election Day, the conference will focus on an issue Democrats see as a winner among voters.

Conference attendees will include educators, law enforcement officials and families touched by school violence.

Clinton arrived in New Orleans Sunday after a weekend of golf and political fund raising in his home state. While there, he planned to attend two fund-raisers for Louisiana Democrats. He had dinner Sunday night with Sen. John Breaux, D-La., and other state party leaders.

Tidal wave kills 700, more dead expected

Associated Press

VANIMO, Papua New Guinea — For the villages hit by a 23-foot wave in Vanimo, Papua New Guinea, the furious waters nearly wiped out the next generation in the seconds it took to toss people into trees, hurl them into a lagoon or pull them back into the ocean.

The official death toll from Friday's disaster was at least 700, but John Tekwi, governor of West Sepik Province where the wave hit, said at least 3,000 people had died, the Australian Broadcasting Corp. reported Monday.

Most of the confirmed dead and the many missing are children.

"What chance would a 2-year-old or 3-year-old child have?" asked the Rev. Austen Crapp. "It wipes out everything, destroys everything, bounces people off trees, off obstacles, bowls them into the lagoon, before it turns, rushing back out to sea."

"The children may be hiding somewhere; we hope so. But the fear is that they have drowned," the priest said.

Most children were home on a holiday when the wave struck, rather than in religious mission schools where they probably would have been safe.

The wave, known as a tsunami, was created by a magnitude-7 under-sea earthquake and destroyed several villages along an 18-mile stretch of Papua New Guinea's north coast. About 6,000 people were left homeless.

Papua New Guinea, with a population of 4 million, occupies the eastern half of the island of New Guinea about 90 miles north of Australia, where some live a near-Stone Age existence amid jungles and swamps.

The once-idyllic fishing villages that bore the brunt of the tsunami were eerily silent Monday; even the trees seemed to have been stripped of the birds that normally abound.

Tekwi wept for the missing children and looked about in anguish, saying, "Where is everybody else?"

Area disaster coordinator Dickson Dalle said the villages of Aitape, Nimas, Arop, Sissano and Warapu had been smashed. Other villages along the heavily populated coastline were badly damaged.

About 1,000 bodies had been buried so far and at least 3,000 people were missing, said Jim Croucher, a Roman Catholic missionary coordinating rescue efforts. The estimates were based on accounts gathered by Australian aid workers.

Missionaries and villagers buried the dead where they lay on beaches. Others patrolled the sea in motorboats, towing nets to try to reclaim floating bodies.

"Many more bodies are still stuck in the debris within the mangrove swamps, within the lagoon itself, caught between the debris of the buildings, the coconut trees, all the bush, the trees that have been thrown into the lagoon," Tekwi said.

Villagers said salt-water crocodiles that live along the coast were feeding on the corpses, according to Marc Sindek, an oil company manager from Vanimo, about 60 miles west of the affected area.

Rescuers also turned their attention to the injured, although many remain difficult to find after having fled in terror into the jungle-covered mountains.

"There are a lot of injured adults coming into the hospital, but no children," the Rev. Augustine Kulmana said. "Many children have disappeared."

"One helicopter pilot said he saw a lot of bodies trapped in the mangroves and they were children," he said.

Trooper hits boy in chase

Associated Press

PRICE — An 11-year-old boy remained in critical condition Monday after he was struck by a Utah Highway Patrol cruiser as the trooper chased a suspicious car.

Michael Kouris was riding his bicycle in Price, 97 miles southeast of Salt Lake City, when the accident happened at 4:18 p.m. Sunday.

He was flown to Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City, where his condition was unchanged Monday.

Price Police Chief Aleck Shilaos said Trooper Cortland Childs was in Price when he heard from radio dispatch the description of a car that supposedly had a child locked in the trunk.

He immediately spotted the described car and gave chase.

The trooper was driving in the middle turn lane, about 40 miles an hour, when Kouris turned onto the road and into the path of the cruiser, Shilaos said.

Childs swerved to avoid the boy, but could not. The boy was not using a crosswalk or wearing a bicycle helmet when he was struck, Shilaos said.

The Price police investigation's results will be turned over to the Carbon County Attorney to decide whether charges will be filed against anyone involved in the accident, Shilaos said.

The suspicious vehicle was stopped by other officers, who found a child inside the trunk, deliberately holding down the trunk lid, Shilaos said.

Missing hiker and dead Great SL

Associated Press

UTAH — The body of a Midvale man has been found on a rugged, steep part of the island in the Great Salt Lake.

The body was spotted at 7 a.m. by a Utah Highway Patrol trooper, about a mile from the shore. The man had been missing two days.

The man's search and rescue team members hiked out to the body later in the morning, and the body was recovered.

The man had been combing the south end of the lake for a week. Hobson worked for a construction company.

The man was found on a rugged, steep part of the island in the Great Salt Lake.
